

The Montois museum

A true conservatory of rural society, its rooms offer knowledge of the various trades and activities in the Montois area up to 1970, including work of the fields, leather work, animal husbandry, and everyday life.

Paroy church

Present since the 11th century, the church has endured many disasters: plundering during the Hundred Years War, fire that destroyed the bell tower and then struck by lightning.

Thénisy wash house

This facility prevented the washerwomen from having to travel to the banks of the Auxence, quite a distance from the village. The site was called Roises because it was also used to ret hemp.

Sigy church

As early as the 16th century, the lord of Roux made improvements to the chapel. Further modifications were made in 1626, in 1752 and again in 1847. The small bell tower now houses a bell from 1734 named Gabrielle.

Sigy Castle

It was built during the 100 Years' War and redesigned during the 17th century. It is built on stilts and surrounded by moats over 35 metres wide in some places.
